1 WORLD TOURISM DAY SYMPOSIUM – RETHINKING TOURISM VENUE:
MIDLANDS STATE UNIVERSITY, GWERU The 2022 World Tourism Day Symposium will be held at Midlands State University main campus, Gweru, Zimbabwe. The purpose of this symposium is to bring together researchers to present and discuss issues that resonate with this year's World Tourism Day theme, i. e. rethinking tourism. This theme is better captured by the United Nations Secretary-General Antonio Guterres when he said, "As we restart and recover from the pandemic, the UNWTO has a key role in rethinking tourism and its interaction with societies, economies and our natural resources and ecosystems. That means green tourism, with high-emitting sectors including air and sea transport aiming for carbon neutrality. It means inclusive tourism that benefits marginalized communities and contributes to gender equality and intercultural understanding. And it means sustainable tourism, which builds resilience, protects our planet and delivers on the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable In light of the foregoing, the World Tourism Day Symposium will provide a platform for showcasing thought-provoking research on contemporary and vexing tourism related issues focussing (not exclusively) on the following themes: • Tourism and climate change • Tourism and poverty alleviation • Innovation in the tourism industry • Tourism and indigenous people • Tourism and global pandemics or crises • Tourism and information communication technologies • Tourism and wildlife conservation • Tourism and land reform • Tourism and human resources • Tourism and entrepreneurship N.
